

97. UPWORK

<https://www.upwork.com>

Formerly oDesk, Upwork stands out for its easy-to-use interface, both for freelancers and clients. Clients post projects along with specific details, such as whether the pay will be hourly or project based and what their budget for the project is.

Freelancers create profiles highlighting experience and then submit applications for specific jobs. Your profile also shows ratings and reviews from past clients—thus, a freelancer can earn higher-paying jobs by generating good feedback over time.

Upwork has applications to manage paperwork and time tracking. They also facilitate payment through their platform and offer escrow services.

HOW TO SIGN UP

<https://www.upwork.com/signup/>

98. VIRTUALVOCATIONS

<https://www.virtualvocations.com>

VirtualVocations differs from most job listing sites by exclusively sharing telecommuting jobs. Dedicated researchers on the VirtualVocations staff comb through internet job boards, blogs, social media streams, and direct employer posts to collect thousands of legitimate and verified telecommuting listings.

Free registration allows you to access a select number of job posts, while a paid membership grants access to the entire site.

HOW TO SIGN UP

<https://www.virtualvocations.com/register>